

I support net neutrality. In order for the internet to be free, internet providers should be regulated. Title II should be kept in place and no changes should be made.

If the argument is that Title II be removed because internet providers would not take unfair advantage of the system, then what is the use of removing Title II? Keep it in place as a check on the internet providers. If internet providers are not going to mismanage their power then great, but if they do then a check system is in place (Title II) to ensure they don't affect the freedom of the internet.
